

Wine and dandy

Liquor law changes that should see an avalanche of bars open in Sydney are still yet to appear but it hasn't stopped some enthusiastic pioneers getting a head start. Sommelier-about-town Clint Hillery will open a wine bar on Stanley Street, East Sydney, late next month. Elsewhere the sprawling GPO food venue has opened its new Cheese and Wine Room, in a reclaimed sandstone space deep in the GPO basement. "Cheese is the star of the show. There are over 100 of them to choose from," says owner Peter Petroulas, "But we're also doing antipasti and 250 different wines."
